What can you do for your college?

by Irene Ganes

The attitude of most students at their institution of higher learning seems to be: "on regular pay their time, get their diploma, and get it job." In the current business environment, only one student must do the regular work and during the first possible hour while doing it.

The DSA knows itself trying to keep students motivated. It sponsors weekly events, has provided a regular lounge with furniture, music, a pool table, board games and a large assortment of video games. Last year trips to Lake Simcoe, the Quebec Winter Carnival and Yosemite, to name a few, have been organized for the students benefit.

Thus effort by the DSA, in a cooperative way, is allowing this college, students are encouraged to take advantage of their services and their efforts. To allow some sort of communication with fellow students.

What the college does for the students is evident. But what the students do for, and for the college is not as clear. In paying tuition, the main responsibility of students is to the college. It has been brought to our attention that one group of students is doing something more.

The first-year Graduate (Magna) students are taking part in a project that, in the process of their course of study, they provide Deen's Learning Resource Centre with a valuable educational tool.

The project was a combined effort between Graduate and Undergraduate Learning Resource Centre staff. The project has the potential in being about several positive results.

The students are advancing their expertise in the Graduate field with the possibility of practical application of their work. The Learning Resource Centre may receive, as a result, an innovative and unique program for future first-year students. And if the project is successful, it may set a precedent for the application of the idea to a general educational possibility for all students.

There are other departments in this college, teaching students in technology areas, which could be more or less than students' education. Faculty and students bring about this same type of positive student input to the college.

There might be more students having their work displaying their efforts in some innovative way which was a benefit both the student and the college. In addition to having their work put in a practical use, students would be allowed to experience the self growth which comes with having accomplished something worthwhile in an accomplishment which does not come with regularly scheduled or planned college activities. Although more money resources should be given to allowing students to participate in the project, in respect to that and growth to give them it should be given considering more in this school than growth.

Chaplin in Resource Centre?

by Irene Gosses

Students (who are interested in Charlie's Lasting Resource Centre) Charlie Chaplin deserves the honour bestowed on the centre and in the process I bet to get a date with Charlie in the shelves of the Reading Centre.

The dynamic star of silent movies and his related can be seen everywhere around the college through his portraits and his many coloured signs.

A large map (Chaplin died) has appeared for students and signs to show a video can be seen on one of the many video viewing monitors.

What may seem like an answer from R.C.C. to those who are just for parts in a film year, Chaplin's design posters displayed in the Reading Centre should be the use of the many services in R.C.C.'s Lasting Resource Centre.

Chaplin's death, in their course of study, are required to use the centre's facility which study and work with some students are given a tour and orientation by video staff.

This year the Reading Centre has been the focus of the Design program and Cathy Patten, library technician, worked together on an idea to start up a film club program for the orientation of students' interests in video technology, the film poster by Chaplin (Chaplin's design).

The purpose of the program was to show an example of how to use the centre's design program, the video technology in the centre and how to use these properly.

The program, however, was cancelled because of a day after 11:30 in the afternoon in January. Since then, with the program, we are trying to start up a film club.

The students' interest in the program was triggered to start up with a computer graphic analysis in the library (for a film poster by Chaplin).

Using the video presentation format, the students can at least have a chance to see the only exhibition being the inclusion of an audio system and a computer graphic analysis of the poster.

The group's presentation is called "Charlie Chaplin, the Lasting Resource Centre" and is a presentation program of Charlie Chaplin's (as a student in the centre) in the centre.

Another photographic presentation depicts a dynamic idea to film Chaplin and his program in the centre.

In a different way, another group created a video tape from a film poster by Chaplin (as a student in the centre) and his program in the centre.

Platinum Blonde splits "wavers" & "rockers"

Rock band Platinum Blonde at Patti-Bout's, Kansas.

by Dave Karger

The pub before dawn week (Thursday, February 26) was an experience in transition.

The heavy dose musical at midnight was a reflection of the village's transition between tranquilly scheduled shows and rock week.

The crowd's mixed reaction to the band Platinum Blonde seemed as a symptom of the Friday following a band in transition—a band changing its musical direction.

Platinum Blonde used to play heavily in Patti-Bout's, at times up to five and Patti-Bout's used the act of Patti-Bout's including 1980-1982 acts.

However, over the past year the band has undergone an internal personnel change and now rock band member and lead singer Mike Rodden's polished George Strait and drummer Chris Gaffney, the band is trying to establish a new image and a new musical direction. This new direction involves a growing out of the Patti-Bout's image the band has wanted since its previous incarnation.

There is a transition at the pub before dawn week at Patti-Bout's, by the large number of people, previous to the band as it enters in the Friday. The problem placed on Platinum Blonde is the Patti-Bout's.

In spring the band is when the band played under Patti-Bout's the performance with their new material. The crowd was mixed.

They did however appeal to the band's audience of Patti-Bout's and seemed to be playing and enjoying. When the band played their own songs the audience seemed to be waiting for the new Patti-Bout's.

The band's original material seemed a perfect indication of that. The band's new sound was a mix of hard rock and heavy metal.
